To graduate high school in Texas, you must first pass exit-level exams in Math, Science, Social Studies, and English Language Arts. Each test measures your general knowledge and ability in the subject, as defined by state-determined minimum standards. The exit-level exams are first given during junior year. However, you may retake them until you receive a passing score.

Online TAKS Course

The courses in Math, English Language Arts, Social Studies, and Science prepare students for the exit-level TAKS exams. Using the results of the diagnostic test given at the beginning of each course, lessons and practice questions are assigned to address the particular needs of each student. The courses are individualized, and each student can progress at their own pace.
